Ode to Harvest Moon.

By HENRY KIRKE WHITE.

Moon of barvest, herald mild Of plenty, rustic labor's child. Hail! O hail! I greet thy beam, As soft it trembles o'er the stream. And gilds the straw-thatched hamlet wide, Where improves and page reside. Where innocence and peace reside:
'Tis thou that glad'st with Joy the rustic throng.
Promplest the tripping dance, th' exhibating song.

Moon of harvest I do love
O'er the uplands now to rove,
While thy modest ray screne
Glids the wide surrounding scene;
And to watch thee riding high
In the bine vault of the sky.
Where no thin vapor intercepts thy ray,
But in updouded references. But In unclouded majesty thou walkest on thy way,

Fleasing 'tis, O modest moon!

Now the night is at her noon,

Neath thy sway to musing lie,

While around the zephyrs sigh,

Fanning soft the sun-tanned wheat,

Riened by the summer's heat;

Picturing all the rustic's joy

When boundless plenty greets his eye,

And thinking soon,

O modest moon'

And thinking soon,
O modest moon!
How many a fer-ale ere will roam
Along the road,
To see the load.
The last dear load of harvest home The last dear load of harvest home.
Storms and tempests, floods and rains.
Stern despoilers of the plains.
Hence away, the season flee.
Foes to light-heart joility.
May no winds careering high.
Drive the clouds along the sky.
But may all nature smile with aspect hoon.
When in the heavens thou show'st thy face, O Harvest Moon:

Neath you lowly roof he lies,
The husbandman, with sleep scaled eyes;
He dreams of cr ded burns, and round
The yard he hears the fiall resound;
Oh! may no hurricane destroy
His visionary views of joy;
God of the winds, oh! hear his humble prayer.
And while the moon of harvest shines, thy blustering whirlwind share

Sons of luxury, to you
Leave I store dull power to woo;
Press ve still the downy bed,
While feverish dreams surround your head,
I will seek the woodland glade,
Penetrate the thickest shade,
Wrapt in contemplation's dreams,
Musing high on holy themes,
While on the gale
Shall softly sail
The nightly sail The nightingale's enchanting tune,
And oft my eyes
Shall grateful rise
To thee, the modest Harvest Moon!

Mr. Dooley The Power of the Press

By F. P. DUNNE

Mr. Dooley is no respecter of persons; in this article he flings his kindly and mirthful jests at Roosevelt, Bryan, Cleveland, Hearst, Miss Tarbell, Baker, Steffens, Winston Churchill. At every turn the reader is stirred to laughter, and every quip and gibe decked in humor and gayety suggests a wisdom and knowledge of this prankish world. This is one of the many interesting
